The Young Curators Project has provided Year 11 Visual Arts students with the opportunity to engage as curators to produce an exhibition of prominent Australian artist, Euan Macleod's artworks. Over the past two terms, students have worked together, visiting galleries and working with Euan Macleod at his studio, learning about curatorial practice. The culmination of the process is an exhibition of Euan's works, titled 'Chasing Light'.

Young Curators Reflections:

My experience in the Young Curators project has been one of the highlights of my High School experience without a doubt. I got to meet people my age that share my interests, but I would never have met them due to our different environments. I gained friends and knowledge.

Vanja Starcevic, Dulwich High School of Visual Arts & Design

I've been able to gain knowledge on the art curation process. Highlights: meeting the artist and understanding the process and meaning behind the works and his concepts and collaborating and working with him. Meeting and getting to know the other students and working with them and sharing ideas.
